These elusive gems are hidden beneath the surface of the Green Moon's lush forests. Now in high demand, a robust and ever-growing luxury market has emerged. Jewelers favor reticular clarity and the depth of the amber, so the more pristine and beautiful the specimen, the higher a price it will fetch.

Aurelac grows in subterranean colonies of rhizomatic organisms, just waiting to be unearthed and plucked by an eager entrepreneur. However, hunting aurelac is a nuanced endeavor, best approached with patience and care. Once you track down a deposit, which is no easy task in itself, you'll be faced with a challenging, multi-step extraction process.

But take heart! By carefully following procedure and equipped with the right gear and chem, success can be achieved by even the novice prospector.

Like any venture worth its weight, the voyage out is no small feat. However, passage now is far more feasible than for the first pioneers. Due to Rush demand, the former Kaslo Service Route has been extended into the Central-BG line and is now open to commercial and private transit.

Drop pods are recommended for most parties as the density of the forest thwarts larger landing craft, though carpeting landers and basecamp orbiters can be utilized by more sophisticated expeditions.

Kaslo Porting established the Central-BG line and continues to push further into the Fringe.

The Central-BG line terminates in the Bakhroma System and travelers can disembark when the freighter passes the Green Moon.

Return pickups are permitted on the second pass by the Green Moon after the sling-back.

Most Consistent. The Creamiest.

SLING-BACK TRAJECTORY

THE SLING-BACK MANEUVER

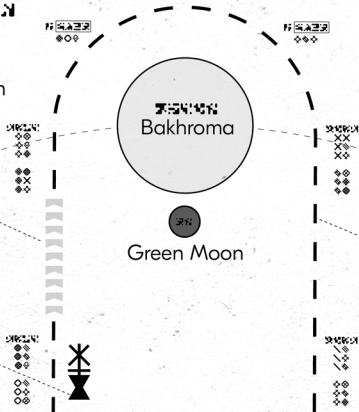

The sling-back maneuver takes 3 cycles, setting the freighter on return course to Central.

PLANETARY DROP-IN DETACHMENT ZONE

Once freighter enters slingback, detachment is prohibited.

The patch gun is a must-carry item for any wilderness traveler. A simple trigger-pull produces medicated foam useful for treating all manner of open wound. Once hardened, it serves as a resilient air-sealed bandage. Avoid the fuss of gauze and ointments. Fast-acting and quickly applied, this field-proven salve has saved the life of many an exposed adventurer.

The most ubiquitous and pervasive foes to the Aurelac prospector are the toxic spores that fill the air. Inhalation will lead to death by asphyxiation in a matter of hours. But the solution is simple. Rest easy with a Level 3 Particle Grade Air Filter. Be sure your cartridge is compatible with your respiration system and pack plenty of refreshers. Available for both mobile and integrated systems.

While we aren't normally suckered into ostentatious gear-raz, the Ralon Crusader offers an upgrade we can't deny will pay for itself in a single pull, especially for the less experienced harvester. When shredding blisters, the greatest risk is a gem-compromising acid breach. A single nick risks thousands in payload. Only a laser tool can offer the precision and caution to effectively lower the skill threshold of this daunting task.

These original-recipe nutritional slurry packs are easily worth the upgrade from the generic swill. Aurelac prospecting requires patience, more easily worn thin when sustained by foul-tasting nutrition. Pastors Henry Slurry Packs offer a balance of flavor and convenience, perfect for the long operations in the wilderness.

BOSCELOT FRONTIERSMAN

The Boscelot Frontiersman is solid, affordable, medium range hunting thrower. Colloquially referred to as "The Floater's Comfort", it's easy to see how it earned this moniker. The simple design is optimized for easy repairs, keeping it functional during long stands away from civilization. The construction is lean and flatpackable, ideal for economy passage between ports.

The simple design is optimized for easy repairs, keeping it functional during long stands away from civilization. The construction is lean and flatpackable, ideal for economy passage between ports.

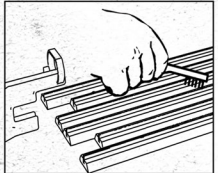

Packs flat to meet freight regulations and conserve precious cubage in tightly packed pods.

Munition rods last for 2,000 shots and the single-shot capacitors are powerful enough to pack a healthy punch, but low grade enough to be functionally rechargeable. The ability to refresh with the included crank charger keeps your capacitor cache modest, allowing a footbound adventurer to salvage precious stockweight.
